EARLY ALERT:

In coming months the DD Consortium will offer a comprehensive Resource Guide for residents of the community with developmental disabilities and their families.

In 1987 March was established by presidential proclamation as National Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month. Since then organizations such as those in the DD Consortium have used the month of March to urge the American people to accord to "our fellow citizens with such disabilities both encouragement and the opportunities they need to lead productive lives and to achieve their full potential".

Examples of developmental disabilities include: autism, cerebral palsy, Down syndrome, intellectual disability and other forms of life-long disability that may inhibit an individual's functioning in several life activities. At the same time people with developmental disabilities are productive, contributing citizens in their communities, learning, working, playing, and living alongside their typically developing peers in an inclusive way with respect for their human dignity.
